INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. In 1884, at the very moment that Mr Bradshaw had called my attention to the present Glossary, preserved in an 8th-century MS. (No. 144) belonging to Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, as one that deserved to be published, Prof. Wülcker issued his edition of Thomas Wright's Vocabularies, in which he professed to give all the Latin words interpreted in this Glossary by Anglo-Saxon words, omitting all the Latin and Latinised Greek words which it interprets by other Latin words.

§ 2. As it appeared to me that his edition did insufficient justice to the great importance of the Corpus Glossary for the study of A. S. as well as Latin, I still considered that it would be worth my while to copy and publish the whole of it. But as, shortly afterwards, Prof. Zupitza announced in the Academy of 3 May, 1884 (p. 317), that he had copied the Glossary some years ago, and that from his transcript Wülcker had excerpted the Latin-A. S. glosses, and not from the Corpus MS. itself, I asked Zupitza whether I could have his whole transcript for the sake of publishing the entire Glossary under our joint names, in which case I would collate his copy with the MS., and see the work through the press. As he assented, and Prof. Skeat recommended the publication of the Glossary to Dr Atkinson, the Master of Clare College, and at that time Chairman of the Pitt Press Syndicate, the latter kindly persuaded the Syndics to undertake the publication.

§ 3. Before I say more, it is necessary to point out that the plan of publishing the work under Prof. Zupitza's as well as my own name, has, with his consent, been abandoned. His transcript, prepared many years ago for his own purposes, has, indeed, served throughout as a basis for this edition, but before the text could be printed off, so many important matters had to be done and settled by me who alone was able to consult the MS., and saw the work through the press, that it was resolved that my name alone should appear upon the title-page, and the responsibility for the present edition rest solely and exclusively with me. I have, however, had the great benefit of Prof. Zupitza's revision of the proof-sheets, and on two occasions (p. 76, note 1 and p. 91, note 2) I refer expressly to his transcript, to show the weight which I attached to his readings, in cases where there might be any doubt, but where I thought it necessary to differ from him¹.

§ 4. The Corpus MS. is made up of 33 sheets of vellum, divided into 7 quires or gatherings of 4 sheets or 8 leaves each, and an eighth of 5 sheets or 10 leaves, the first of which has been cancelled², so that the whole MS. is composed of 8 quires or 65 leaves in small folio, measuring 9¼ inches (= 235 millimetres) in breadth, and 12½ inches (= 308 millimetres) in height.

The first and last quire bear no signatures; the second to the seventh are marked, on each first page, with the respective signatures II, III, IIII, V, VI and VII. The glossary proper begins on the recto of the second leaf, and is continued without a break till the end of leaf 65. The contents of the first leaf have already been described above (pp. 1 and 2).

After the glossary follows a quire or gathering of two vellum leaves, filled with a Latin treatise (in two columns on each page) on patronymies (Patronomieorum posita), in an Irish handwriting of the beginning of the 12th century, which, though a little larger, otherwise strongly resembles that of the Gospels of Maelbrigte, figured on pl. 212 of the London Palaeographical Society, and there ascribed to the year 1138. These two leaves are stuck into another blank vellum sheet, the first half of which has been cut away, the other left blank. There is nothing to show how these two (three) leaves became connected with this 8th-century glossary, which is bound in a simple binding of last century, if not later.

§ 5. As regards the age of the MS., Mr Bradshaw was of opinion that it must have been written in the beginning of the 8th century, and I do not think that we should be justified in placing it later¹. To enable anyone to judge for himself, a full-size photograph of one of its most characteristic pages, executed by the Cambridge Scientific Instrument Company, accompanies this edition. Here and there the wrinkled and rugged condition of the vellum did not allow photography to render the colour of the ink of the ordinary letters in that evenly black condition² which we observe in the MS., while the various colours, red, green, yellow, used for illuminating the capitals and marking³ the initials, come out black in the plate, as usual. But in all other respects it is a perfect reproduction of the handwriting, which is A. S. half uncial, and which, when compared with that of the Lindisfarne Gospels (about A.D. 700), and other MSS. of the 8th century, as the Canterbury Gospels, Passion from the Gospels, Cassiodorus, figured on plates 3, 4, 6, 7, 163, 164 of the London Palaeographical Society (first series) may be said to be rather earlier than later. As I have pointed out on page 2, the Corpus MS. belonged, in the 13th century, to the St. Augustine's Library at Canterbury, though we have no evidence that it was written there.

I do not think that the Epinal Glossary should be dated earlier than the Corpus. Its handwriting shows it to be of the first half of the 9th century, and the organic changes and scribal corruptions, observable in the spelling of Latin words, are already more advanced, and in some cases show a greater slovenliness, than in the Corpus Glossary, though occasionally it has preserved more correct forms than the latter. In my opinion the Epinal MS. stands, in point of time, much nearer to the Erfurt Glossary, which is attributed to the end of the 9th century, than to the Corpus. In the edition of the Epinal Glossary, published by the Early English Text Society, the editor expresses the opinion that it "must have been written at least a generation earlier" than the Corpus MS. His opinion is not shared by competent palaeographers, and it would, moreover, not be difficult to show, if it were worth while, that the "archaisms" and peculiar letters, on which it is founded, admit of a different construction.

² The ink of the page photographed and of many other pages is evenly black, but there are a good many pages on which the ink has a faded and uneven appearance.

§ 6. Ruling. Thirty-three lines for the writing drawn on both sides of the leaf with a hard point, with perpendicular lines to divide the page into two columns, which are doubled on the left margins to mark off the space for the initials. Nearly every line, as well as the holes in the right and left margins made by the instrument used for the ruling, are still clearly visible in the MS., and may likewise be discerned in the accompanying photograph. Here and there an attempt has evidently been made to separate the interpretation from the lemma of the gloss by a well-regulated space, and thereby to subdivide each column into two, so as to make four columns on a page. But the narrow space at the scribe's disposal prevented him from doing this everywhere.

§ 7. The character of the ornamental letters may be seen from the two G* and the H which appear in the photographic plate. Wherever a new letter of the alphabet commences, we find a large capital like the H set off with various colours, mostly red, blue or green, and yellow. Wherever a new second letter begins, a smaller capital like the G is placed.

§ 8. Punctuation is done by a point, which more than once takes the form of a short comma. Very often it is impossible to decide whether the scribe meant to write a full-stop, or merely made a dot in the act of resting, and withdrawing his pen, as the point is in a great many cases tacked on to the end of the letter which concludes the word.

§ 9. Signs of reference. Final words or parts of a word, for which there was no room on the line of the gloss, are written above or underneath that line, and marked off with a slanting waved line, or a symbol in the shape of an acute angle, as may be seen on the accompanying photograph (lines 1 and 4 of the left-hand column). To indicate the place where words, written some distance away from their proper place, should be inserted, a slanting line with a dot on its left or right, or between two dots, was used (see p. 3 note 4, p. 4 n. 2, p. 19 n. 5). Whole glosses omitted are added at the foot or top of the page, marked by the usual h and ð (see p. 28 n. 5, p. 113 n. 3).

§ 10. The contracted words are numerous, but there are no more signs employed in the MS. to indicate contractions than the usual ones in MSS. of the eighth century, as: (1) a horizontal stroke, which is very often waved. (2) a symbol like a right angle (∟). Both may be seen in the accompanying photograph, and we find either the one or the other nearly always written over the last letter (mostly u, sometimes a or e) of a word (or syllable), to indicate the omission of a final m; sometimes it indicates the omission of -um (especially c = cum) or -ur. But they also appear over such words as: dus (= dominus), dnm (= dominum), dni (= domini), dne (= domine); do (= deo), di (= dei), dm (= deum), ds (= deus); dr (= dicitur); dt (= dicit); dut (= dicunt); mi (= mei); n (= non); nn (= nomen; but usually a stroke over each n); p, or po, or pt (= post); qnd (= quando); sca (= sancta), scae (= sanctae), scs (= sanctus); scm (= saeculum); sps (= spiritus); st (= sunt); xps (= Christus).

Besides the above, more or less regular and common, contractions, the two signs are also indiscriminately used to point out such irregular and not always certain contractions, as: a or at (= aut); aduoc (= aduocavit); ambul (= ambulandi); amminie (= amminiculum); arb (= arboris); gen (= genus); incip (= incipit); incumb (= incumbens); intel (= intelligere); libro (= librorum); ped (= pedis and pedum); popul (= populum); qsi (= quasi); rem or reman (= remanens); sec (= secundum; sometimes expressed by s with a stroke through it); syl or syll (= syllaba or syllabae); (t = -tis), and a variety of other contractions, the expansion of which can only be decided by the meaning or form which the contracted word must have in the particular gloss to which it belongs. They are also employed to mark contractions in A. S. words (see for instance A 117), but more rarely.

The horizontal stroke with a point above and underneath stands for est, which is occasionally combined with pot = potest. A long i with a point on its right and left, or on the right only, = id est. But sometimes these two words are expressed by the i with its two dots, and the sign for est. A long i with a stroke through it = inter.

one c turned round usually indicates the prefix con-, but on fol. 36^{bb} con- is indicated by c with the acute angle over it; two c turned round = contra.

an open a written above certain letters is a contraction for ua or ra; sometimes it is merely the ordinary form of a.

-ur is usually expressed by the stroke of the t being more curved upwards than that of other t's; though sometimes we find its omission indicated by the ordinary horizontal stroke or acute angle (see above).

the t of ut is sometimes written above the u.

Besides the above contractions there are the usual ones for (1) aut (namely an h with a stroke through the top; but this word is sometimes expressed by a or at, see above); (2) -que; (3) -bus (also used for -bet; (4) qui; (5) quod; (6) quae; (7) quam; (8) prae-, or pre.; (9) pro; (10) per; (11) eius; (12) et; (13) ra. But not having the requisite types at my disposal to figure them here, I refer the reader to the descriptions accompanying plates 3, 7, 163, 164 of the London Palaeographical Society, merely remarking that the sign for enim I have not observed, nor that for -us (9). The same descriptions may be consulted with regard to the individual letters of the handwriting, as n, r, g &c.

All contractions have been expanded by italics in print, except in two or three cases where it was difficult or impossible to determine which word the scribe meant; see pp. 4 (n. 7), 7 (n. 3), 17 (n. 1), 21 (n. 7), 32 (gloss 433). The scribe did not always write the proper sign, as in B 192, where quae had to be printed, though it refers to "flos". On the other hand, castel on p. 5 (gloss 120) stands for castelli, but it had to be so printed, as there is no sign of contraction in the MS.

§ 11. There appear to be no more than three initial directors in the whole MS.; namely an a, written by the side of the initial capital A on foll. 5^{aa}, 5^{ba}, and 8^{ab}. I cannot say whether they were intended to guide the illuminator or the reader.

§ 12. A few combined letters or ligatures occur in the MS., as nt, ni, mi (in the latter two cases the i is tacked on to the last stroke of the n or m), mo, tio, tur, rum, us, ss (long), æ, e. Perhaps I may mention also gm, gn, gr, gi (see photographic plate, line 6 right hand column); but there are a good many such combinations.

§ 13. Accents occur occasionally. They have all been printed, and special attention is drawn to them in notes, so as to prevent their being taken for misprints.

§ 14. Letters or words intended to be erased are marked by a point underneath. Wherever a wrong letter occurs in the MS., and the correct one has been added above the line, without the former being marked for erasure, the wrong letter has been printed as part of the word, and the correction indicated in a note. Sometimes, where it seemed of any importance, it has been pointed out that a letter or word is written over an erasure, or where a gap is made by an erasure. But these erasures, though rather numerous, have everywhere so skillfully and thoroughly been effected, that no trace of the original letter or word has remained anywhere; it would even seem that here and there the vellum had been scratched before it was written upon. Hence it was deemed needless to draw attention to these erasures wherever they occur.

§ 15. It will be observed that the Corpus Glossary consists of two parts: (1) an interpretation of Hebrew and Greek names, occupying pp. 3—8, the former of which are mostly, if not all, taken from St Jerome's Liber de nominibus Hebraicis; some of the Greek nouns are found in the treatise "de Græcis nominibus", ascribed to Eucherius, bishop of Lyons, while some others (p. 3, gloss 35; p. 4, glosses 69—71 &c.) I have been unable to trace to their sources. This part merely brings the words together under their initial letter. I always refer to it in the Introduction, Indices &c. by "Int." (= Interpretation). (2) A collection of glosses compiled from various sources, bringing all the words together whose first two letters are the same. Wherever there is a deviation from this plan, as in A 47, 120, 204, 259 &c. &c., we may regard it as a mistake.

§ 16. The Syndics of the Press, while consenting to the publication of the Glossary, informed me that the edition was to be merely an exact reproduction of the MS., that is to say, with all its scribal mistakes, errors of grammar, erroneous divisions of words, peculiarities of spelling &c. &c., without an elucidation of any, even the most corrupt, glosses, and that my notes should be strictly confined to explanations of the graphical alterations or corrections made by the scribe or his corrector.

§ 17. It will be seen that I have throughout adhered to this plan, which I practically proposed myself, and only deviated from it on very rare occasions. For instance, on p. 3, the twelfth gloss is printed Afertice, as in the MS., without a word to explain that it stands for aphaeretice. On p. 4, there is no note to gloss 76 to say that colu should be colon; nor one to gloss 90 to indicate that uersum stands for uersuum; nor one to gloss 94 to explain that for diastile we must read diastole. On p. 5, gloss 118, Eucharitia is printed as in the MS., without an explanation that Eucharistia is the right spelling; and gloss 121 aparatio without a note that apparitio is the word meant. And so in numerous other cases which will be found more fully explained below in the paragraphs 23—63.

§ 18. On the other hand, the 59th gloss, on p. 4, is explained by references to Jerome and Eucherius, because, having been unable to understand the gloss, and taken the trouble to trace it to its source, I considered it advisable to save similar trouble to others. Other attempts at elucidation, by references to other glosses in this edition, or to other works and glossaries, will be found on pp. 7

(n. 3); 17 (n. 1); 18 (n. 6); 19 (n. 8); 21 (nn. 8 and 9); 22 (n. 5); 28 (n. 2); 30 (n. 1); 38 (n. 3); 44 (n. 4); 45 (n. 2); 50 (n. 3); 53 (n. 6) &c. &c. Again, on p. 9 it is suggested in note 1, that for discerede of gloss A 11 we should read biscerede as in the Epinal and Erfurt glossaries. This suggestion is made, because it is possible to make discedere of the Corpus MS. reading, the de being written over the r, thus: discere. And the word is omitted by Mr Henry Sweet from his Oldest English Texts (p. 37), and by Wülcker in his edition of Thomas Wright's Vocabularies.

§ 19. Again, on p. 6 it is pointed out that gloss 223 really consists of two glosses, but on p. 15 I print (A 457) as one gloss what the MS. divides into two. In these and some other cases, where I might easily be suspected of having misread or misunderstood the MS., if I had followed it faithfully, I correct where it was easy to do so, as in A 457; but the gloss on p. 6 could not be altered without a violent change, and I 85, 86 on p. 65 had to be left as in the MS., as I did not observe this separation of one gloss till the whole sheet 5 had been indexed, so that a rectification would have interfered with my numbering. But everywhere I call attention to the condition of the MS. in a note, while suggesting the correction, or sometimes without any explanation at all. For instance: on p. 5 the MS. has distinctly serarium in gloss 127, and so it is, of course, printed. But as the r and n differ but very little in the MS., I felt it necessary to point out in a note that the mistake for senarium is in the MS. Similar notes will be found on pp. 11 (n. 7), 13 (n. 2), 17 (n. 9), 18 (nn. 1 and 7), 19 (nn. 4 and 5), &c. &c.

§ 20. Likewise, in cases where other editors have seriously misunderstood or misread glosses, I call attention to the fact in notes. See for instance gloss 229 on p. 6; gloss 357, p. 92; gloss 227, p. 29 &c.

§ 21. As regards the division of words, the MS. has been followed throughout, even in cases where it divides wrongly; see for instance p. 11 (A 173). It seemed to me unadvisable to alter, or even to suggest an alteration of such words as "amoenibus" in A 907. The lemma is evidently taken from Virg. A. 1. 697, and should be auleis superbis, but it is uncertain whether we must divide "a (= in) moenibus," or regard amoenibus as a corruption for amoenis. Musiramus (M 336) is no doubt the classical "mus araneus," but the former seems to have superseded the latter in late Latin, and I did not feel entitled to divide the word, not even in the Index. But there are glosses where I considered it unadvisable to adhere to the MS. reading. For instance, the words multarum gentium of gloss 8 on p. 3, are written as one in the MS., and it was so written in our transcript. But the compositor, finding no room for the whole compound in one line, divided it after multarum, and placed a hyphen after this word. This looked to me so misleading, that I thought it better to separate the words, but to indicate the state of the MS. in a note. Other deviations from the MS. reading, always for some reason or other, will be found on pp. 7 (n. 4), 9 (n. 2), 10 (n. 3), 12 (n. 7), 15 (nn. 7, 8, 9 and 10), 19 (n. 6), &c. &c.¹

It is to be observed that no importance is to be attached to the divisions of the MS. In a good many cases the scribe does not seem to have understood the glosses which he was writing, and could, therefore, not be expected to divide the words properly. Quite as often he would hardly have had room to separate the words correctly, even if he had known how to do it. In a few cases only he seems to have aimed at some explanation of the component parts of a word or of a gloss. But wherever there was any doubt as to how the scribe had divided the words, I have given the correct division the benefit of the doubt, and in the Index, moreover, every word is entered in its proper place.

§ 22. Having now described the MS. and its most characteristic features, as well as the method adopted in dealing with the MS. readings, I proceed to give a short review of the peculiarities of the Glossary from a philological and palaeographical point of view, confining myself to the Latin portion of it.

At first sight the glosses appear to be in a very corrupt condition. I shall, however, endeavour to show (1) that the numerous deviations in spelling from what we now know as classical Latin, are mostly due to organic changes, which either were introduced by the scribe of the Corpus MS., or had already been effected in the MS. or MSS. which he followed; (2) that many of the corruptions are due to misreadings of our scribe or his predecessors, which may almost be said to have been natural and unavoidable, on account of the form which the misread letters had in ancient handwriting.

§ 23. That the Corpus Glossary is not an original work, is apparent from a good many glosses, which are now so corrupt and altered from what they originally must have been, that they are almost entirely unintelligible. For instance, the gloss C 373: Cherochelini inmallones, for ceruchi lineae in malo navis (see also C 222, 324 and 346), is the work of a copyist transcribing an already corrupt example, not that of an original compiler. But, even in cases of this kind, nearly all the corruptions can be traced to the organic changes or systematic scribal misreadings which are pointed out below (§§ 39—60). The wonder is that glosses such as that just mentioned, should have been passed over by the corrector who corrected so many words. It seems, however, that, in regard to knowledge, he was just in the same position as the scribe, as he wrote, for instance, enebata for eneruata in gloss E 66.

§ 24. In dealing with the changes or misspellings in the Glossary, we must take them as we find them, without being able to enquire whether our scribe, or the MS. which he followed, is responsible for them. Nor will it be necessary, while recording the various spellings, to refer to them as already occurring in late classical authors. It seems clear, for instance, that such corrupted lemmata as bacillat for vacillat (B 7), berrus for verres (B 70), berruca for verruca (B 71), &c., must have been inserted, in this condition, in the present glossary or its example, straight from the sources whence these glossaries were compiled, as it is hardly probable that, if such words had been originally arranged under the v (u), a scribe, even with the most debased pronunciation, would have deliberately arranged them under the b. By "sources" we need not necessarily understand "authors"; for the words of glossaries like that of the Corpus MS., which is already alphabetically arranged according to the first two letters of each word, must have been collected in earlier glossaries according to the first letter of each word. The latter, in their turn, were no doubt compiled from so-called class-glossaries, in which glosses had been copied from various authors or interlinear glosses, in the order in which they followed each other in the texts, or arranged under subjects. So that the glosses, before they were copied into the Corpus MS., must have already passed through at least two or three stages in other MSS.

§ 25. We could not speak of an error where the interpretation does not agree with the lemma of a gloss, either in case, or tense, or person, or number. For instance: E 205, where enigmata need not be altered to enigma, to agree with the sing. similitudo; E 426, where it is, at least, doubtful whether honorat should be altered to -ret, to agree with extollat. Such discrepancies occur frequently; see, for instance, F 20, where Fastis must not be regarded as a mistake for Fasti; F 54, where Facetias is not necessarily an error for Facetia; F 144, where tristitia stands perhaps for tristia, though the former is not necessarily wrong. Nor could we call T 277 tramitum glossed by uia transuersae, a mistake. M 38, maiales, probably = maialis, though the former, a plural, cannot be said to be wrongly glossed by a word in the singular. So, having regard to the A. S. adjective in gloss F 153, we might feel tempted to alter the lemma into ferrugineus for ferrugine. But in all these and similar cases, which might be quoted by dozens, the glossator, I think, simply indicated the sense of the lemma by some more familiar word, without pausing to make the cases, tenses &c. agree, and it would be unadvisable to correct them, as the very form of the lemmata will often enable us to trace them to their sources. For instance, C 979, the gen. cycladis (or the plur. for cyclades) was, no doubt, taken straight in that form from some author. Glosses like P 722 (praecipitat), P 736 (promunt), quote the exact form of Virgilian words (Aen. II. 9 and 260). Praestantis of P 770 would suggest praestantes of Aen. VIII. 548, if not some doubt arose from "excellentes" being corrected into "excellentis". Again it is difficult to say whether exheredet, in E 381, is a subj. quoted in that form from some book, or whether it should be altered to -dat, to agree with alienat.

§ 26. But when we except such glosses, a good many still remain, the defects of which we could not ascribe to organic changes or systematic misreadings. Here other influences have been at work, as truncation: A 226 (adipiscit for -scitur); C 103 (caractis for cataractes); E 232 (epome for epitome); F 152 (sacer for sacerdos), 209 (pietaci for pittacia), 242 (flore for floralia), 421 (rustici for rustici haruspices); H 88 (androg for androgynus), 166 (hynę for hyaenę); I 241 (interpola for interpolata, see 340); L 27 (fenes for fenestras); 191 (linquid for delinquit); M 51 (made for madens), 255 (sextari for sextarii XVI); N 59 (dilatio for dilatatio), 99 (caelesti for caelestem), 159 (nob for nobilis); O 51 (perseuerant for perseueranter), 220 (pandat for pandatur), 253 (or for orsus); P 222 (perfungit for -tur), 311 (pessul for pessulus), 357 (steba for stebadiorum), 852 (saltus for locus altus?); R 96 (concordi medii for concordiae medius); S 292 (necessiam for necessariam), 305 (sistit for sistitur), 320 (ambagus for ambagibus). 446 (spurcia for spurcitia); T 253 (omits: ordinibus remorum); U 168 (uitiginem for utiliginem), &c. &c.

Such truncations are easily understood when we examine the facsimile page accompanying this work, and see how often the copyists were obliged to write the final or last two or three or more letters of a word or of a gloss above or under the line. Sometimes the interpretation was written two or three lines away from the lemma, upwards or downwards.

§ 27. Some of the above truncations are, of course, due to the contractions of the original having been overlooked or misunderstood, as for instance, where final ur has been omitted after t, as this was simply indicated by the horizontal line through the t being more bent upwards than in other t's. In some cases we find ur wrongly added, as N 21 (inueniretur for inueniret); P 280 (percurritur for percurrit), where the scribe perhaps had a t before him of which the stroke was too much bent upwards. The same contraction was, no doubt, wrongly expanded in other cases, as L 188 (trutinatam for trutinatur). Other contractions were also wrongly expanded, as O 118 (capiter for capitis); S 34 (perfecti for præfecti).

§ 28. Transposition of letters: B 45 (barbenta for brabenta); C 960 (piscarum for spicarum); F 90 (fastigasti for fastigatis), 95 (farrice for farcire), 416 (pulcharre for pulchrare); G 27 (garilum for galerum); I 14 (icist for istic), 413 (intrinicio for internicio), 424 (inlustare for insultare); L 37 (lanucar for lacunar), 274 (lucor for lurco); M 68 (sculptor for sculptor); N 156 (nocticula for noctiluca); O 189 (ciuibus for uicibus); P 23 (ceuairstias for cucaristias); R 173 (ridigus for rigidus); S 478 (spiciones for scipiones), 680 (curribus for eruribus); T 148 (sculptae for sculptae), 186 (tipsina for ptisana), 232 (trubidus for turbidus); U 101 (uegros for uegors = necors).

§ 29. Misreading of strokes: C 836 (commulsa for connulsa); H 115 (hincire for huicine); I 525 (iumperum for iunip-); L 14 (lamsta for lanista), 231 (linifator for lymphator); M 64 (manpularis for manip-); O 131 (farma for farina); P 66 (pantominia for -ma), 105 (palmiatus for palmatus), 854 (pube temis for pube tenuis); S 315 (commus for quominus), 346 (sinifonium for symphonium), 379 (smus for sinus); U 252 (unibrellas for umb-).

§ 30. Wrong division of words: A 628 (anacephaleos in repetitionem, for -leosin); P 794 (productalem strumentum for productale instrumentum).

§ 31. Wrong case-ending: H 17 (uestum for nestem); M 272 (monarchus for monarcha, perhaps through confusion with monachus, or the Gr. μονάρχης). Wrong genitive: P 17 (lapis for lapidis). Wrong gender: L 154 (nauis piraticus for ...piratica); C 982 (permultos for permultae). Lines or words out of place: C 847 (flagrat, with its interpretation conburit, wrongly tacked on to comentarium, the interpretation of which is either lost or added to some other gloss); M 190 (uel corui marini, a repetition, in the wrong place, of part of M 182, or the remainder of a similar gloss as the latter). Compare also C 888 with F 158 and D 219; while damde of D 16 seems to be the same as clande, in D 5, &c. &c.

§ 32. Wrong or imperfectly effected corrections: F 224 fuxit, with l added above the line; but perhaps fuxit was meant. R 37 in exili was forgotten to be marked for erasure.

§ 33. Wrong additions of letters: H 25 (habyssum for byssum, perhaps through confusion with abyssum); N 95 (laborare for labore); P 333 (pecunia for pecua).

§ 34. There are other corruptions which can only be partially arranged under the above operations or the organic changes which are pointed out hereafter, as: C 707 (conpliciis for conplicibus), 761 (continuatur for *contionatur*¹), 833 (pastiarium for participarium); M 273 (monarcha for monomachia); N 34 (nanat, frangat, perhaps for nafragatur, nanem frangit), 92 (nestorio for nefario?); O 205 (earnes for carmen); P 43 (pareitatem for ?), 125 (parasiter for parasiti), 354 (peripitegi for peripatetici). See also P 364, 365, 366, 367, 382 (amare domorum for amatores donorum), 796 (oratorum for hortorum), 837, 838, 840; Q 65 (quinos for cynicos), 79 (quurris for curulis); R 25, 32 (accepitur for accipitris), 61 (rexenteseon for exegeseos?), 149 (metallaris for ?), 203; T 2 (tagax for taxat).

§ 35. Such misreadings as angustior for augustior (A 640), whereby not only the lemma has come to mean exactly the opposite of the interpretation, but the word inserted in a wrong place in the alphabetical arrangement, will be found classified below. F 333 (frugalis: largus) might, at first sight, seem to be a somewhat similar gloss, and to have arisen from an original parcus (= frugalis) having been changed first into pargus and then corrected, by someone who did not understand the latter word, into largus. But the Leiden glossary has: "Frugali, larga uel lata."

So again, the lemma of I 449 does not agree with the interpretation, as inepti is not = adquisiti; but the original glossator must have written indepti, and the Leiden glossary has actually indeptum = adquisitum. I 484 and I 488 were probably written together in earlier glossaries. So also I 527 and I 529, P 368 and P 369. Again, G 152 and G 163 seem to go together as gramina: herba arida. But there is always some danger in correcting glosses without having them satisfactorily traced to their origin. For instance, at first sight it would seem that P 715 and P 716 go together, but a comparison with what we read on p. 246 in Hildebrand's Glossarium Latinum shows that we must pause before attempting such a combination. Likewise in such a case as F 274 where forda is explained by sus pregnans, perhaps for bos pregnans.

§ 36. We now come to certain alterations in the spelling of Latin, which, as they occur more than once and some even frequently and regularly, must clearly be attributed to the pronunciation of the respective vowels and consonants by the scribes, and which, therefore, may be described as organic changes, which, if they had not been arrested by occasional reforms in the writing of Latin, such as those instituted by Charlemagne¹, would have produced, in course of time, a written Latin language, almost as different from the classical Latin, as the spoken Italian, French and other Romance languages.

I observed these peculiar spellings and the frequency and regularity of their occurrence some years ago, while working at a Mediaeval Latin Dictionary, more especially after the appearance of the Catholicon Anglicum, published by the Camden Society in 1882. A collation of this work with the Additional MS. 15,562 of the British Museum, which contains the same text as the Catholicon, but the various readings of which have only been occasionally indicated by its editor, showed me that these spellings and changes were capable of being systematised and tabulated. The result of a few months' work in this direction was very gratifying, as it gave me a key to almost all the corruptions and different forms of one and the same word in Du Cange and various other Mediaeval Latin glossaries. An examination of the Corpus Glossary brings out the fact that, though there is an interval of eight centuries between it and the Catholicon Anglicum, which is dated 1483, both these glossaries, written in England, stand in precisely the same stage with regard to deviations from the classical spelling of Latin caused by pronunciation, and changes caused by misreadings of certain letters.

§ 37. Having these tables of the changes and corruptions in the Catholicon, I began to compile similar ones for my own purpose, while seeing the present Glossary through the press. During the course of this work, however, it occurred to me, that, instead of scattering observations or hints as regards peculiar spellings or corruptions in occasional notes, the publication of portions of my tables might be of some use to students of Mediaeval as well as classical Latin, and to future editors of glossaries. In my opinion those who, during the last few years, have advocated or introduced certain modifications in the pronunciation of Latin, have not paid sufficient attention to what has been going on in that direction for eighteen centuries, as is exemplified by nearly every Latin MS. preserved to us, though a great deal of the evidence regarding the pronunciation of Latin is lost to or concealed from us by the alterations which the editors of Latin texts effect in printing them.

§ 38. As it is not my plan at present to write a treatise on these organic changes, but merely to point them out, and reduce them to such a system as may assist us in understanding and correcting Mediaeval Latin, and likewise the corrupted spellings found in the MSS. of classical authors, I bring here together, in an alphabetical arrangement, the most material part of the evidence that I have been able to collect, from the present glossary, concerning each individual letter of the Latin language. In this system I include not only those changes brought about by the pronunciation of the scribe or scribes, as b for p, l for d &c., but also the omission or insertion of certain letters, and misreadings, as A for B, and o for s (C). As I did not begin the drawing up of these tables till after the printing of the first thirty-two pages, the examples from these pages are less numerous than those of the remaining portion of the glossary, though I believe that even from those thirty-two pages I have collected the most material evidence.

Though the tables are entirely the result of my own observations, having hardly read any books on the subject, I am aware that most of the phenomena which I point out are known and have been discussed in various scholarly works. But the tables may, perhaps, derive some advantage from their being drawn up from a genuine and clearly written eighth-century glossary, to which, at the same time, they may serve as a kind of key.

§ 61. When we place all the above clerical errors, scribal misreadings, organic changes &c., side by side, then ponebus (P 485) and panibus (P 147) for *Phoebus*¹, become intelligible. The first scribe wrote, no doubt by mistake, poebus, and added h above the line: poebus^h. The next, misreading h for n (as in some other cases recorded above, § 50), and incorporating the correction with the word, wrote ponebus, which some other scribe or scribes altered, by the natural changes pointed out above, into panibus. In other places we find genuine Latin words formed regularly from other genuine words, as habitat for hebetat (II 50)

¹ I think it useful to point out that Prof. Skeat, writing, in the Academy of Feb. 9, 1884 (p. 99), on the gloss "panibus, sol", said: "It is not easy to see how panibus can be explained by sol if sol means the sun. If phonetic laws will admit of it, we would suggest that sol may be English; and, if so, a variant of Anglo-Saxon sufl, leelandic sufl, Danish suul, which actually means a kind of food. The Northern-English word is still sool, and is duly discussed in the notes to Piers Plowman (Early-English Text Society), p. 374."

The Corpus Glossary, however, offers four glosses for comparison, namely,

P 147 panibus : sol	} mentioned above
P 485 ponebus : sol
P 388 phebe : sol
S 439 Sol : phoebe

while the Leiden glossary quotes from the "Liber Rotarum"

Phoebe : sol

So that, I believe, the question is settled in favour of sol being the Latin word for sun, and panibus, ponebus &c. corruptions for Phoebus. While I write this note, Prof. Skeat informs me that he is now rather of my opinion, and that he at present doubts if A. S. sufl is likely to appear as sol in the 8th century.

and initia for inedia (I 60), though they are totally wrong in the particular places where they occur.

§ 62. Though the Corpus Glossary contains many Greek words, several of which are taken from St Jerome's Liber (or Catalogus) de viris illustribus, they are all expressed in Latin characters, except one which begins with Λ , but is found among the Λ glosses (see Λ 593 $\Lambda\Omega\Omega\text{RH}\text{T}\text{O}\text{N}$), owing, no doubt, to a scribe having mistaken Λ for Λ^1 . As the glossator explains this word by ratio populorum, it would seem that an N has dropped out, and that the original must have had $\Lambda\Omega\Omega\text{NR}\text{H}\text{T}\text{O}\text{N}$. The Corpus gloss seems identical with that in the Epinal Glossary (3 C. 26), which the editor transliterates by acbodinrotan. This is correct, except the i, which could not possibly be read from the sign which follows the d, and looks like c turned round. In fact, the so-called di, look more like ch, unless, combined with o, they are the remains of a corrupt Ω . The Corpus and the Epinal glosses seem identical with that in the Erfurt Glossary (Neue Jahrbücher für Philologie, 13^{er} Supplementbd., Leipz., 1847, p. 262, no. 295), which, according to Oehler, reads "Acdoëroaton, ratio populorum."

A similar, perhaps the identical gloss occurs in a Leiden Glossary (MS. No. 69 of the Leiden University Library), in a chapter or collection of words which is stated to have been taken from St Jerome's Catalogus mentioned above. It reads: "Cintiota oni taltaon: ratio populorum." In the transcript which I made of the Leiden Glossary in 1885, I have written a note that the last a might be read as ie. But even with this change, there is only a faint resemblance between the Leiden word or words, and the three readings given above. Several words, which the Leiden Glossary states to have been taken from the Catalogus, I have been unable to trace in that work. But many others we can trace from the prologue down to chapter 118 (Migne's edition). Now, "Cintiota..." is written in the Leiden glossary between the glosses "monon: unius" of ch. 101, and "temoys: libros" of ch. 109, wherefore it seems that "Cintiota..." is to be looked for in the chapters 102—108. But the only words that I can find suggestive of the gloss are $\kappa\alpha\tau\grave{\alpha}\ \tau\acute{\omega}\nu\ \text{Ἐθνῶν}$, which occur in ch. 107. This agrees more with the Leiden MS., than with the Corpus, Epinal and Erfurt readings. But if there is a difference, I do not know how to reconcile it. It would almost seem as if one of the readings were St Jerome's own word or words, while the other might have been derived from one of his commentators. Perhaps those versed in Patristic literature will be able to solve the difficulty.

§ 63. Similar observations to those detailed above might be made about the A. S. words; but these I leave to students of that language. They are everywhere marked by an asterisk¹, and I have paid as much attention and care to them as to the Latin portion of the work, and have had, moreover, the valuable help of Profs. Skeat and Zupitza, so that I trust that no Latin words are marked as A. S., and no A. S. words left unstarred. A few deserve to be mentioned here:

Int. 92 decurat, hornnaap. Prof. Zupitza, in the Academy of 1884, p. 317, suggested that "horn is = orn (ran), and naap = náp, from nipan (sank down), and decurat a mistake for *decurrit*²".

A 459 Alapiciosa: calpa. This is actually so written in the Corpus MS., and there is, as far as I know, nothing against an A. S. "calpa". But I believe that here it is an error of the A. S. scribe for the Lat. calua, which is found in the Epinal and Erfurt MSS., while the latter MS. has, moreover, alapiciosus: calvus in another place. And as the same gloss occurs in a Latin Glossary (Corpus Glossariorum Latinorum, ed. Geo. Goetz, vol. iv. p. 471) in which there are no A. S. words at all, we may safely regard the Corpus "calpa" as an Anglo-Saxonized form of the Latin calua.

A 712. Apporeor: onsteuum. Before the sheet, in which this gloss occurs, was printed off, I removed the star from before onsteuum, on a hint given to me, which I was not prepared to disregard, that the word could not be A. S. But I still look upon it as an A. S. word, though perhaps corrupt; cf. A 666 and Mr Henry Sweet's Oldest English Texts, pp. 558^b, 559^a.

B 89 Sperta is marked as A. S., though it may be the Latin sporta.

B 136 perna is starred, though it may be the Latin uerna.

C 250 and C 256 I do not understand, in spite of all my endeavours to make them out. In the Harleian MS. 3376 (10th cent.) I found Cataerinas glossed by hyppan, and caluiale without any explanation.

C 882 Cripta: aseussum. I dealt with the latter word, as with onsteurum mentioned above. But I now prefer to regard it as A. S., perhaps some form of a-seunian. The Erfurt MS. has areussum.

A 483 (challes); F 342 (lose); G 25 (pea); M 155 (meadrobordan); O 91 (grestu); P 411 (osperi, or os peri), P 562, 874 (fahame), 572 (senuin) I do not understand.

I 25 oxstaelde. Prof. Zupitza suggests on-staelde.

M 121 malas: gebsius. The latter word as pointed out to me by Prof. Zupitza, just before this preface went to press, must be the Latin geusiae, quoted by Du Cange (sub voce) from Marcellus, Liber de medicamentis (cap. xii, p. 93, in the Basle edition of 1536, or col. 295 in the Stephanus ed. of 1567): "Affectae maxillae ad sedandum dolorem dentium et gingivarum et geusiarum adhibentur". The word is not found in any Latin Dictionary, not even in De Vit's edition of Forcellini's Lexicon, though he says that he had used the Basle edition of 1536.

P 27 Parabsides: gauutan. We find in the "Glossarium vetus", published in Mai's Classicorum Auctorum tom. vi, in which no A. S. words occur, "parapsis, gabata nel eatinum" (p. 538), and again (p. 539) "pisi, gavata vel patina". This Glossary has just been republished in Goetz' Corpus Glossariorum who, at the first gloss, says (Vol. iv p. 136) that a second hand has corrected gabata into gauata. The second gloss he prints "pisi gauatha nel patina", adding that two other codices have gabata.

The Latin gabata (on the etymology of which see Forcellini's Lexicon and Isid. Etym. 20. 4. 11) has been used by Martial, Ennodius, Anthimus, Venantius. Diez (Grammatik, 3rd ed., i 17) refers to Span. gábatu, newpr. gaorula, Fr. jatte, Ital. gavetta. Graff (Althochdeutscher Sprachschatz, iv. 126) quotes gebíta, gebida, gebitta, gebeta, gebiza, gepiza, gerbíta, and in an A. S. glossary, of the 10th or 11th century, published in Wülcker's Vocabularies, we find, in col. 280, among words belonging to the table: "parabsides, gabote". So that the word seems to have been adopted by various languages.

T 263 Tragoedia: bebbi cantio. If any word in the glossary looks like genuine A. S., it is bebbi. Thomas Wright inserted it in the second vol. of his Vocabularies, p. 122. Prof. Zupitza had marked it as such in his transcript, and it has, consequently, found a place in Prof. Wülcker's Vocabularies, and been starred in the present work. But, while indexing the A. S. words, further research brought me, I believe, on the right track, and bebbi seems to be nothing but a corrupt Latin word. On leaf 31^{aa} of the Leiden MS. (Voss. 69) the first gloss quoted "de Eusebio" runs: "Tragoedia . bellica cantica . uel fabulatio . uel hircania: Trago Hircus." This is identical with the Epinal gloss 26. E. 18 "tragoedia: belli cantia uel fabulatio" and Erfurt: "Tragoedia belli cantica uel fabulatio."

T 321 tubolo: fala. The Epinal Glossary has (27. A. 11) tabula: fala; the Erfurt Glossary (Neue Jahrbücher für Philologie, 13^{er} Supplementbd., 1847, p. 382, no. 90) tabulo: fala. Thomas Wright, excerpting the Corpus Glossary, did not insert this gloss in his Vocabularies, so that he seems to have thought that fala was not A. S. But we find it in the second edition of his work by Prof. Wülcker, and, though I know the Latin fala or phala, yet I have marked the word as A. S., for various reasons. The gloss is quoted, and fala described as A. S., in Diefenbach's Glossarium (under the word tabula), not only from the Erfurt Glossary, quoted above, but also from articles in Anzeiger für die Kunde des deutschen Mittelalters, Vols. VII, p. 132 sqq., VIII, 233 sqq., Mone's Quellen, I 310 sqq., 329 sqq., which I have not here at my disposal.

The word fala is also quoted in Leo's Angelsächsisches Glossar, 524. 50, from the Glossae Mettenses (= Anzeiger, VII 132). It there means tabula. The gloss appears once more in Diefenbach's Glossarium, under the word aulena, as: "tubolofola: andedabrondra." But this is a mixture of two glosses, which Diefenbach quotes from Bethmann's article in Zeitschrift für Deutsches Altertum, vol. v, p. 197, and which the latter inaccurately copied from the Leiden MS., Voss. 69, where we read "tubolo, fala." In the latter MS., in which the glosses are for the most part still arranged under the authors whence they are derived, this particular gloss appears, unfortunately, in a chapter containing mixed glosses from various authors, so that we cannot follow the word to its source with any certainty. But as the Leiden MS. is tolerably accurate in many respects, I believe that tubolo, not tabula, is the right reading, all the more as the latter, being such a well-known word, would not easily have become corrupted. The identical gloss occurs, no doubt, again in a

MS. of the 10th or 11th century (Brit. Mus., Cotton, Cleop. A III, p. 76 sqq.) published in Wülfker's Vocabularies, where on col. 279, the 10th gloss is "tubulo : fealo." This interpretation would mean either fallow or many.

§ 64. As in the course of my work I have been able to trace a good many of the Latin glosses to their sources, and Profs. Mayor and Skeat have pointed out to me the origin of several others, it would not, with the help of the various glossaries and treatises on glosses published during this century, be difficult to draw up a list of such glosses as we have identified. But the list would be still incomplete, and it would moreover, in my opinion, be better to defer such a work, for which I have already made elaborate preparations, till the glossaries related to the present one, like those of Epinal, Erfurt and Leiden, are accessible to students of this branch of literature in trustworthy editions¹. Of the Leiden glossary, in which the glosses are, to a great extent, still arranged under their respective sources, and which, therefore makes the identification of a good many glosses comparatively easy, I made a transcript in 1885, but its handwriting is so puzzling in many places, that I could not think of publishing it without making a fresh collation of the MS. There are, moreover, various other glossaries in the Libraries of Cambridge (for instance: MS. O. 5. 4 of the Library of Trinity College), Oxford, and the British Museum, which deserve to be published, not only on account of their great importance for the study of Latin, but of English. Nothing could be more desirable than the publication of some of them on the plan of such great works as that of Steinmeyer and Sievers (Die althochdeutschen Glossen), which is a real monument of labour and research, and the Corpus Glossatorum Latinorum, now in course of publication at Leipzig by Dr Geo. Goetz. I only express the hope that complete and exhaustive indices, not only to the lemmata, but also to the interpretations, will accompany all works of this kind, as without them the use of glossaries, which are not arranged strictly alphabetically, is extremely laborious, and causes a waste of time, which I had very often reason to deplore greatly.

§ 65. The two indices, which follow after the Glossary, are meant to be exhaustive. In the Latin index every word contained in the Glossary is inserted in its proper place in the alphabet, in exactly the same form as it appears in the text; but the wrong division of words has not been adhered to.

In the A. S. index I have attempted to analyse the compounds, though I am well aware that in so doing I may have made errors¹, and appear here and there as deciding questions which philologists are not yet agreed upon. For instance: athed, aðere I have ventured to treat as composed of a-, and thed, ðexe, and ecilma, ecilmehti as composed of e- and cilma, cilmehti, and hence these words will be found again under thed, ðexe, cilma, cilmehti. All this may some day be found to be wrong; but, in the meantime, I trust that no inconvenience will arise from my treatment, which I have found to be convenient in other respects.

§ 66. The Corpus Glossary appears now for the first time entire. Three attempts have already been made to publish its Latin-Anglo-Saxon glosses: (1) in 1873, by Thomas Wright, in the second volume of Vocabularies, p. 98 sqq.; (2) in 1884, by Prof. Wülcker, in his second edition of Thomas Wright's Vocabularies; (3) in 1885, by Mr Henry Sweet, in his Oldest English Texts. But each of these editions either omits here and there A. S. glosses, or inserts glosses which are not A. S. at all, so that one never knows what there is exactly in the MS. In the present work each gloss appears, so to speak, in its context. The two parts of the Glossary together contain 8712 glosses, counting the repetition of glosses A 307—348, and reckoning gloss 223, on page 6, and E 282 as two each, and I 85 and 86 as one. The Index of the Latin words contains 21,033 entries, and that of the Anglo-Saxon words 3292; but in the latter Index most of the words are entered twice, some even three or four times.

I hope that the great care and trouble which I have devoted to the work may have succeeded in making it free from serious blemishes. I took it in hand in 1884, when I was told by members of the Cambridge Board of Mediaeval and Modern Languages that there was a prospect of Mediaeval Latin and Palaeography being included in their scheme. I do not know whether there is still such a prospect. But during the years 1885 to 1889, while other work prevented me from devoting the necessary time and attention to the Corpus Glossary, the study and publication of Mediaeval Latin texts and glossaries have proceeded apace in Germany and at Oxford, and I hope that the present work may be of some use to those who take an interest in such studies.

§ 67. I have already said above that Prof. Mayor and Prof. Skeat have pointed out to me the origin of several of the glosses. But in kindly going minutely over all the proof-sheets, they have also noticed many of the scribal errors and organic changes found in the glosses. The plan adopted for the publication of the glossary did not allow me to correct the glosses, or to insert Prof. Mayor's acute emendations of various corrupt glosses. But his corrections were often very useful to me in drawing up the tables of organic changes printed above in §§ 17—60, while Prof. Skeat's interpretations of some of the A.-S. words helped me in making the Anglo-Saxon index. My relations to Prof. Zupitza, with respect to the text, are recorded above in §§ 2 and 3, and I add here my best thanks to him for several very valuable observations on, and corrections of, words in the A. S. index. I also discharge an agreeable duty in thanking the Rev. Dr Atkinson, Master of Clare College, for his kind interest in the work, which induced him to recommend its publication to the Syndics of the Pitt Press; the Rev. S. S. Lewis, the Librarian of Corpus Christi College, for having afforded me at all times the most easy and unrestricted access to the MS.; Dr Henry Jackson, Fellow of Trinity College, for various useful observations, and the Syndics of the Press for their liberality in defraying the expenses of the publication.

The above is all that is written on the recto of the first leaf of the MS. But it has not all been written at one and the same time, or by one scribe. (1) The line at the top; the words in the left-hand column from Agius to aquas, and the first line in the right-hand column, are in the handwriting of the 8th century A. S. scribe, who has written the whole Glossary that follows hereafter. This portion is perhaps a trace of a first attempt to arrange scattered glosses in a more or less alphabetical order, and which seems to have been abandoned for the better one commenced on leaf 2. (2) A first addition to the original writing was made in the right-hand column by an A. S. scribe of the 9th or 10th century, who, imitating the original writing of the MS., has added the line containing the words Achanthos to losa (of which latter word the s has been partly erased). (3) The remaining words in this column have been added, in small Caroline minuscules, by an A. S. scribe of the 10th or 11th century. Iþi is probably nothing but some scribbling of this scribe. (4) A further addition has been made, in the left-hand column, after aquas, but in the same line, by an A. S. hand of the 11th or 12th century, who has written Sanctus spiritus, and haligast over these two words. (5) The word concrepare, in the left-hand column, has been added by an A. S. scribe of the 12th century, in Caroline minuscules. (6) Lower down, in the centre of the leaf, is written, in a hand of the 13th century, the pressmark of the St. Augustine's Library, with the title of the MS. : Distinctio &c. (7) Underneath this pressmark follow some letters or words (here represented by dots), probably written in the 13th century, but now for the most part erased, though, on the left hand side, we may still discern abdefgh. (8) Further down we find the old pressmark (S. 3), by which the MS. is designated in 1722 in Will. Stanley's Catalogue of the books bequeathed by Archbishop Parker to the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, p. 55 ; and still earlier in 1705 in Humphr. Wanleii Librorum Vett. Septentr. qui in Angliæ Bibliothecis extant, ... Catalogus (Antiquæ Literaturæ Septentr. Liber alter, p. 115 b.) Fol. Oxon. And by this pressmark it was very likely indicated in the List of Books bequeathed by the Archbishop to Corpus Christi College. But this List, which is mentioned in the Deed of the bequest (still preserved in Corpus College), cannot now be found. (9) By the side of the old pressmark is written the new one (144), by which the MS. is designated in 1777 in Nasmith's Catalogue of the same collection, and which it still bears.

Fol. 1^b. Here an A. S. hand of the 12th century has scribbled :

³ MS. apoplexa, with i added between x and a, but by another hand and in different ink.

⁴ So in MS. and the first negle underlined.

⁶ So divided in MS. for aptet uos.

⁷ MS. has accent above res.

⁸ This word is apparently corrupt; cf. Epinal Gloss. 5 A, after 21. It does not seem to be A. S.

³ MS. anaglosa, with r added above the line, between a and n, by a hand of the 11th or 12th century.

⁴ MS. ceber, with first c altered into g, and a stroke added between the topstroke and the bow of the b; but by a later hand.

⁷ MS. healecas, with h added above the line in different ink, probably by the same hand that corrected A 763.

⁸ A 780 is written as two glosses in MS., and had also been numbered as A 780 and A 781 in our transcript; hence there is practically no A 781.

³ Cf. Gloss. F 158, and D 219.

⁴ First t added above the line.

¹ This gloss occurs in another glossary as Orbia, siffarunda (Mai Class. Auctt. vii. 572, who prints wrongly: fiff). Cf. Loewe in Acta Societ. Phil. Lips., ed. Ritschl, vi. 363, who refers to the gloss in Placidus: "Orbia: genus quoddam escarum, quod quidam Saturni orbiam vocant." He does not know, however, how to explain "siffa rotunda." The Epinal Glossary has (17. e. 3): Orbia: sifanutunda. The Erfurt Glossary (Neue Jahrb. für Philologie, 1817, p. 357): obia (for orbia): sifanutunda.

¹ So in MS., but a later hand has added i between d and e in different ink.

² reorum is underlined in Prof. Zupitza's transcript, and appears, consequently, as A. S. in Prof. Wülcker's Vocabularies (p. 38, n. 37), where it is, moreover, suggested that reorum = reorung, and means mussitatio. But this is very unlikely, as pedor, = paedor, means nastiness, filth, stench, and would, therefore, not have been explained by a word meaning a suppression of the voice, silence. The gloss probably answers to that in the Erfurt MS.: pedora, aurium sordes; see Neue Jahrbücher für Philologie, 13^{er} Supplementbd. (1847) p. 366, No. 71; and below P 353.

⁵ Both e's are accented in the MS., but apparently by a later hand and in different ink.

³ This word appears as A. S. in Wülcker's Vocabularies, i. 39, No. 14; likewise in Mr Henry Sweet's Oldest English Texts, p. 87, No. 1571. The latter, moreover, inserts from the Epinal and Erfurt Glossaries the following two glosses (ibid. p. 90, No. 837): "Perstromata, ornamenta : stefad brun—staefad brum," and, taking steba, stefad brun and staefad brum as A. S. words, he explains them on p. 463: "Stafod, adj. (part.), striped"; and on p. 636: "brūn, subst. neut., cloth." So that, according to Mr Henry Sweet, perstromata would here be explained as "ornaments, A. S. striped cloth." But steba in the Corpus MS. is a remnant, and stefad brum (not brun as Mr Sweet gives) in the Epinal, and staefad brum in the Erfurt MS., are corruptions, of stebadiorum (*stefadio-*rum), the gen. plur. of stibadium, a bed or couch. Hence the gloss means peristromata, ornamenta stibadiorum. See Loewe, Prodromus, p. 347.

⁴ MS. Zothaeus, but th altered to di.

LATIN INDEX.

N.B. The references are to the initial Letters of the Glossary. For instance: "Abacta, A 21" means that the word is the 21st of the glosses commencing with A (on p. 9). "Abdicatio, E 46" is the 46th of the glosses commencing with E (on p. 45), and so on.

Int. before figures refers to the first Glossary, printed on pp. 3—8, and entitled: Interpraetatio nominum ebraicorum et grecorum. For instance: "Aaron, Int. 13" indicates that this word is the 13th gloss of the "Interpraetatio" (on p. 3).

A few references to the pages of the work are given. For instance: "Achanthos, p. 1"; "Aurium, p. 91, note 3".

Where the division of words is wrong in the MS., it has been so reproduced in the text, but not in the Index. For instance: "pro .anus" of gloss A 25 will be found under "proanus", and C 373 is divided into and indexed under Cheroche; lini; in; mallo; navis; though inmallones, and two or three other similar compounds, have also been indexed.
